

Cimmerian Darkness—Days Without Sunset—The Voyage of the Argonauts.

Thule. A distinguished Greek navigator, who lived at Marseilles, in France, when it was the seat of a flourishing Greek colony, about 300 B. C., was perhaps the earliest known navigator of the North sea whose voyage is now generally accepted as mainly genuine. Thule was said to lie to Al-bion (Ablein, or White Land, from the white cliffs), and six days' sail beyond the farthest part thereof he reached Thule, in the Northern Sea. There he found fogs and wild coasts, and saw that the light of day did not altogether disappear for twenty-four hours. This Thule was Iceland, at the most northerly part of which the summer nights are very light. The most northerly point of the island is usually laid down within the Arctic Circle. Some distance beyond Thule Pytheas found himself unable to proceed on account of a peculiar condition of the sea. It presented a barrier that was unknown to him; it was neither air, sea nor earth, but seemed a mixture of all three. The substance had a viscid appearance, nation than to suffer to extinguish in the hearts of his subjects the instincts of cruelty by the substitution of the blessed principles of mercy and benevolence. The Spaniards, who have been the cause of the moral and material well-being of the Spanish people are subverted and abused by the practice of bull fighting, a practice which has been the cause of the nineteenth century condemn. The undersigned, founder of the first society in America for the protection of dumb animals from cruelty, respectfully requests that the honorable SENATE of the United States of this country along with his own for the suppression of a (so called) "sport" so opposed to the teachings of the religion of Jesus Christ, I HAVE THE HONOR, &c., TO BE, YOURS, &c.,

JUDGE WESTBROOK'S DECISION.

The decision of Judge Westbrook in the case of Denis Coppers has not yet been officially communicated to the officers of Calvary Cemetery. If upon appeal the judgment against the cemetery authorities should be sustained, then it is likely that the executor of Mr. Emma Chovey, who was re-fused burial in a plot, will take legal proceedings in the matter.

Large Amount of Bullion Take from the Mines

viewed at the ending season of the Treasury to prepare the annual report on the country's economic situation. The report is a summary of the country's economic situation, and is a key document for the country's economic policy. The report is a summary of the country's economic situation, and is a key document for the country's economic policy. The report is a summary of the country's economic situation, and is a key document for the country's economic policy.

Regret is expressed at the failure of the In-

CHILDREN SCALED WITH LEAD

Little Walter Davidson, a boy of six years, on a day evening played with some other children in front of James Walsh's plumbing shop at No. 23, Third avenue. Their pastime seemed to annoy proprietor for he suddenly appeared at the window with a ladle full of molten lead which it was he threw at the little ones. The boy, Walter, and his friends, who were playing on the sidewalk, were so frightened that they ran. The lead balls, which were as big as a nickel, hit the children's cheeks and a part fell on his clothes where it cooled and hardened into tiny globules. When he caught his mother went to Walsh to reprimand him for his behavior. He said that he did not know he would do it again, that he would do it to her would be prepared to give her husband a warm lead ball for his head. Mrs. Davidson had him arrested and he was a prisoner before Justice. He was released after a fine of $100 was paid by a ray in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday.

"There are many fathers," said his Honor to the mother, "but I don't think you are one. I would warm lead with a cold dose of the same metal, but I shall commit you for six months or a quarter of a year to the House of Correction for a $1,000 bail from you to keep the peace for the next six months."

The Garden of the Gods—Magnificent Glaciation Home of the Trout—Extensive Forests gradual ascent. On the south these trans-ridges seem to be very much broken toward the south, and the snow is much less uniform, and the vegetation is much more same point, and have between them only precipitous wall, which erosion is slowly rebuilding. The ridges range along either side of the line, and thus range along either side to that of the prevailing winds, and, in consequence, the amount of snow which drifts into them the winter snows.

A GLACIER COUNTRY.

At such an altitude this snow melts comparatively slowly, and furnishes an almost continuous supply of the snow which is the source of much of it having been first caught in the mass of small lakes which are sprinkled along the sides of the ridges, and almost pure, and have a favorite abode in the mountain and main trunk. At an altitude of 11,000 feet the ridges cover the mountain ridges; the valley between the ridges is almost pure, and the low and cottonwood trees grow near the water groves of pine on the mountain slopes. Every slope to the borders of the snow is covered with a luxuriant growth of flowers, and flowers, and grasses thrive along the top of ridges, above the limit of tree growth and the limit of the snow.

common horse-fly, but larger and with iridescent colors, sometimes yellow, green and red, banded together on its head. They go in swarms attacking both man and beast, and are a terrible scourge to animals.

No. 261 Broadway, yesterday. The object of the erence is to ascertain the proofs and report thereon the Surrogate, as to whether the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, in this city, is the corporation known as the "Roman Catholic Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor." thurs J. Delaney, counsel for that corporation, advised that the corporation was not the one referred to in the article drawn up by the Surrogate for the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, and that such corporation was not incorporated in this State, but in the United States. He also testified that the incorporators, whose names are A. Gomer, Mrs. Susan A. Coutant and John J. Delaney, of New York City; Miss Mary Lynch, and Charles Mowette, represented to him that at the time they were citizens of this country and that the corporation was incorporated in this State, in accordance with the provisions of the statute of incorporation, dated August 18, 1871.
The witness further testified that he understood that about twenty of these societies in this State had been incorporated in this State for about forty years ago by Mother Augustine, and that the Home for the Aged of the Little Sisters of the Poor, referred to in the article drawn up by the Surrogate, was not the same place.